The Portal Opens

As townsmen recount, it was late in the eve of the Frost Moon when the sound of a horn could be heard. The sound beckoned an old cleric named Olaof to the cave portal where he witnessed the Horn of Torlis being used by a wicked mage. It is believed that the mage used the horn three times to unlock the portal. Mysteriously the horn was left behind and even more, the portal remained open. Since then, strange beasts have been said to mysteriously pass through the portal.

According to local adventurer Peregrine Doom Slayer, Orcs and other sinister creatures were seen exiting the portal shortly after attacking three Awthorns. Whispers from Treants tell of an Awthorn ritual being disturbed by Orcs and goblin-like creatures. According to a druid named Thalia, the disruption of the Awthorn ritual brought bad omens that plague the stronghold. Hagrove Ards, a bar keep at Elecsirt, claims he heard mysterious voices at night near Dark Entry road just outside the Stronghold.

During the Kalidor tomb raids, a paladin named Rawlin was bitten by a master vampire. To help rid himself of his curse, Rawlin beseeched townfolk for help. With the aid of adventurers, Rawlin was able to confront the vampire in its true form. Rawlin and nine adventurers were able to strike down the vampire and steal its blood. Placing the blood essence into a silver vial, Rawlin called upon the power of Koralith (God of Justice) and was able to rid himself from the deadly curse. According to local gossip, the master vampire was not slain. It is alleged the vampire is responsible for the strange sounds and mysterious voices heard in the dead of night. Two adventurers, Al-Kazar and Arylissa claim the strange sounds were that of a battle between an assassin and two mages in town. To date, no one has reported any further disturbances.
